Student Meeting Features Special

Volume 3, Issue 1
February 2010

Guest Speaker Angela Ganea and Student Coordinator Angela Arhip

The December student meeting took place in a warm, friendly, and open atmosphere. It was a vital and effective meeting for our students and for special guest Angela Ganea, Representative from the Department of Children's Rights and Protection. This gathering didn't only offer the possibility to see each other, to share the news, but also to increase motivation, productivity, and help solve future problems. It also was a source of new ideas and initiatives. Angela Ganea spoke about this direction, about different projects they have and in which our students could participate in as volunteers. Students seemed to be interested in these projects and they are eager to begin their activities. Volunteering can be a positive and helpful experience for all who'd like to support a cause but can't afford to donate money; instead they can donate their time.

Volunteering is not only a good way of acquiring experience, responsibility, etc. It is also a means of developing relationship with the team, maybe fulfill personal aims, and do something great for society.

One of the proposed projects has our students gathering with the street children, just to speak to them and listen to them. Mrs. Ganea feels that the children will feel better and be more open to talking to other youth or young adults rather than to her Department's employees. Physical face-to-face meetings with these children are the most effective type of meetings for conveying feelings and meanings. It could give our students an opportunity to change these children's lives. Helping others in need is such an important idea, as our sponsors do through the Moldova Sponsorship Program.

Best wishes to our student Anatolie on his recent marriage!

Mrs. Ganea offered our program to have the next student meeting at her offices, equipped for such gatherings. Her department also has a psychologist that would be invited to participate. We think that a communication with the psychologist will help the students to feel less embarrassed, to develop as individuals, and act as a support team for each other.
